

THE AL QAEDA THREAT

Is your wallet safe?

Al Qaeda pickpockets are running a brisk business on the streets of Prague.

The nefarious organization has once again branched out into unfamiliar territory, now gambling that America will refrain from tactical air strikes in a major European city.

NOT THE FIRST TIME

Soon after the world became aware of Al Qaeda's existence in 2001, the organization announced, through the mouthpiece of the United States government, its expansion into global illicit enterprise.

When America liberated Afghanistan in 2001, the enemies began as Taliban loyalists — yet they were rapidly converted into Al Qaeda militants by what is suspected to be an advanced Islamofascist mind-transfer device.

When America liberated Iraq in 2003, no sooner had the rubble settled than Al Qaeda troops began tunneling under the earth from their erstwhile haunts in the mountains of Afghanistan. From Iraq alone, we hear weekly reports of Al Qaeda attacks; there, the elusive organization has been smuggling in its endless supply of supplement insurgents to create a false impression of domestic discontent. We now know that nearly 94% of those killed in Iraqi violence are secretly Al Qaeda members.

THREATENING YOUR POCKETBOOK

Reliable sources indicate that there is a new threat. Al Qaeda operatives have been spotted in Prague, living on the streets and subsisting entirely on stolen goods.

FOREIGNERS ARE A TARGET

Al Qaeda is known to target Americans and other foreigners. If you are a tourist, pay close attention to your surroundings. Experts recommend wearing a money belt if possible. Al Qaeda terrorists are inscrutable, ubiquitous, and ruthless; they will take your wallet without a second thought.

YOU CAN HELP

There is a Congressional bill which will authorize preemptive military strikes against nations harboring Al Qaeda pickpockets, burglars, and jaywalkers. Please write your local representatives to express support for S.9886.

For proper safety:

- Travel only in an armed caravan.
- Immediately fire warning shots if you feel yourself pushed or nudged.
- If your wallet is stolen, contact the police to alert them of the Al Qaeda attack.
